

Motive of Health Conference to Check Tuberculosis

The health conference at Chattanooga, Tenn., on November 29th, which was called by Governor A. H. Roberts, to consider a plan to check the tuberculosis death rate in the south and to endorse the Red Cross Christmas Seal sale, will be attended by eight Governors from as many southern states. Those who have signified their intention of meeting with Governor Roberts and the experts from the National Tuberculosis Association are: Gov. C. H. Brough, of Arkansas; Gov. T. E. Kilby, of Ala.; Gov. Hugh Dorsey, of Georgia; Gov. R. G. Pleasant, of Louisiana; Gov. R. M. Cooper, of South Carolina; Gov. James C. Black, of Kentucky and Gov. T. V. Bilbo, of Mississippi.

The chief topic of discussion will be the alarming spread of the white plague in the United States and the application of the most effective preventive measures.

The Governors will also endorse the Red Cross Christmas Seal sale which will extend from December 1st to December 10th. A period of the conference will be given over to the consideration of sales plans which will assure the success of the seal sale in each of the states represented.

The National Tuberculosis Association and its one thousand affiliated organizations, which are located in every state in the Union, seek a working fund of $6,500,000 to carry on the 1920 educational and preventive campaign. The program for the coming year calls for greatly increased activity by every one of the allied organizations.
